

Historic Preservation Businesses

When considering an update or renovation to a historic property, it is essential to find experienced and reliable craftsmen, contractors, and consultants that can be trusted to complete quality work. The following list, divided into a variety of categories important to historic preservation work, is a starting point to researching the businesses that can assist with a particular project. All businesses listed are within the state of Illinois, although some are closer to Washington than others. The businesses are accompanied by at least a telephone number and an address; where there is more information, such as an email address, that is also provided. The majority of this list is taken from the Landmarks Illinois Preservation Resources and West Central Illinois Building and Construction Trades Council webpages, which are great resources to consult with questions regarding preservation. While this list is extensive, it is in no way representative of all potential design professionals and craftspeople in the area. Similarly, omission from this list does not imply that a professional is not qualified, nor does inclusion imply that the City of Washington recommends them based on experience or qualifications. Therefore, prior to completing a project, it is essential to research potential project partners and to ask for advice from property owners that have carried out their own projects, in addition to using this resource guide as a starting point. After consulting the following lists of professionals, for additional information, consult the “Other Sources” section at the end of the Resource Book.
